IN MEMORIAM

In memory of my nephew, Gerald M. Harvey, who died Oct. 30, 1953.

We little thought when you were leaving home,
That youwould never return;
That you soon in death would sleep
And leave us here to mourn.
We often sit and think of you,
And of the way you died.

That you could never say goodbye
Before you closed your eyes;
The blow was hard, the shock severe,
We never thought your death so near.
But only those who have lost can tell,
The pain of parting without farewell.

The flowers we place upon your grave
May wither and decay,
But the love for you who is beneath
Will never fade away.

Memories drift to scenes long past,
Time goes on but memories last,
Loving thoughts, a secret tear,
Keep Jerry's memory ever dear.
Aunt Ida.

Father Parkleaf

by c. h. r.

A letter is at hand from [illegible] Carey, who will be remembered here for his successful work as the local Seventh-day Adventist Church. He is now at Alexandria, and is serving as a missionary-pastor for the West Virginia conference. He sends regards to his many Appomattox friends.

[illegible] E. W. ("Kit") Carson, Extension Agent, was by the way today, to show and leave a sample uniquely made cigar made from dark tobacco. It was grown in Astoria, one of our best and more customers. We understand Astoria wants more Virginia tobacco and we are sure-enough sure of growing it and selling them.

Not long ago recently, we noted the recipe of a good meal was considered most reasonable. The price, we had an excellent chicken dinner, with all the trimmings and dessert, for only $1.00. The next day we ate at the cafeteria at the famous "Penny" Shopping Center, and it was only 84 cents!

The first place mentioned above, the cashier spotted the small safety pin button on my coat and asked me "What kind of a car is that?" I replied: "I am nobody's Man, Ma'am."

And Mother Brickleaf had a pleasant surprise Tuesday, when Mr. Tom T. Borum, of the Eastern Shore, called for a brief visit. Mr. Borum has recently sold his country newspaper the Accomack and is now on a two weeks vacation. It is his hope that your editor will get started in the newspaper business in the late '20's, as he has always considered the Virginia's top weekly publication. We have earned a rest, for we bet at it for nearly fifty years, both then well, and hope the people will enjoy us reaping the rewards of a useful career into which we put a lifetime of hard work.

Closing last week of Mr. [illegible] Appomattox attorney, [illegible] years ago, Laurie told [illegible] when he was a small lad, [illegible] took him to Richmond to [illegible] great grandfather, John L. [illegible] and that the Great John L. [illegible] on his knee! That was an [illegible] so boy would ever forget.

Democratic candidates rolled to an impressive victory in Tuesday's election, with Appomattox setting the pace in the landslide. J. Lindsay Almond, Jr., received a two to one victory over Ted Dalton for Governor. A. E. S. Stephens was re-elected Lieutenant Governor and State Senator Albertis Harrison, of Lawrenceville, was elected to the office of Attorney General.

In this district, John B. Boatwright was returned, without opposition to the House of Deelgates.

A total of 2,046 votes were cast in Appomattox County, with 1,776 of them going to Almond, to 247 for the Republican candidate, State Senator Ted Dalton, of Radford.

Almond's campaign was managed by Rep. Watkins M. Abbitt, of Appomattox. Abbitt has built up an impressive record in managing winning campaigns, having served as manager for the late L. Preston Collins for Lieut. Governor, and for Thomas B. Stanley for Governor, in addition to the recent campaign.

An intensive drive by local leaders in Appomattox resulted in the county giving the winners one of the state's largest majorities.

Prince Edward County gave Almond 2,344 to 462 for Dalton. Nelson gave Almond 1,295 to 262 for Dalton. Amherst had Almond out in front 2,017 to 499. Campbell had 3,277 to 930, in favor of Almond.

Nationally, the Democrats were highly successful in state and city elections.

The East Fork of Falling River Watershed, in Appomattox and Campbell Counties, in 1953 was authorized as one of sixty Pilot Plant Watersheds in the United States. The work plan listed the control measures needed to aid in prevention of flood and sediment damages. All recommended measures were scheduled for completion in five years. The Virginia Division of Forestry, as one of the cooperating agencies, was assigned the management of the timberlands. This represented approximately 65% of the total land area within the watershed boundaries.

In the Annual Accomplishment Report recently submitted by the Project Forester, were listed the following major forestry accomplishments for the first four years of the project activity. The Forester reported that 14,903 acres of forestland had been examined. Once examined a detailed written report was sent to each landowner concerned. A total of 134 such reports were written. Included in each report is a sketch map of the land examined, usually prepared from large aerial photographs. Reference to the map is made as each major timber group is described as according to its age, growth rates, present growing conditions, dead, or dying trees, major species found, and past management practices. Then based upon the information and conditions found, the Forester sets down specific recommendations for the improvement of the timber stands so as to increase future yields under sound management principles.

A total of 1,303,000 pine seedlings were planted. Of this total, landowners themselves planted 993,000 seedlings. The balance (310,000 seedlings) was planted under watershed plans on badly eroded lands. When necessary fences were erected to keep cattle out of the planted areas. Some of the eroded sites were so deeply gullied that the land had to be fastened down before trees could be planted. This necessitated the building of log and rock check dams, at prescribed intervals, in the gullies. This slows down the movement of water and soil. Grass seed and fertilizer were raked into the soil and a protective cover of straw and limbs of trees were used. Some 22 acres of land were thus treated. As soon as a low ground cover was established, the small trees were planted.

Abandoned logging roads, left in bad shape by the timber cutters, had to be filled in, and in some cases, where there was one or more deep erosion gullies, these had to be treated in the same manner as mentioned above. Some of these roads have been planted to trees and others have been seeded to grass.

This work could not have been accomplished without the full cooperation from some landowners, has provided the framework for the small watershed movement now underway. It has contributed valuable information and data necessary for carrying out an expanding program of management in the field of small watersheds.

LeRoux: None.

In a co-operative project, Appomattox starts something new this week, with stores and business places remaining open Friday nights. "Open House" will be observed each Friday night, until 8:30, and this will continue through Christmas.

As a feature of the event tomorrow night, there will be a big parade through town, led by the Appomattox Band. The parade will begin at 6:30 P. M., at the school. The band will present a concert on Main Street.

In addition to the band, the parade will feature tmjorettes, the new 1958 automobile models, farm equipment, and decorated car floats.

Stores will be open for business and shoppers are invited and urged to come out and make purchases, and take a look at new fall merchandise. The car dealers will display their new models. Grocey and other stores will give the public an opportunity to get needed purchases and attend to business needs.

The project is a tribute to the co-operative spirit of local businessmen and a desire to cater to the fact that many working families do not have time to get all their shopping done during regular store hours.

As this project continues through Christmas, other features will likely be added to attract business to Appomattox.
